

Paul Trudgill – focusing on the future at Keeble Hawson

Paul Trudgill has just been appointed to the post of Managing Partner at Yorkshire Law Firm Keeble Hawson. He was already a partner in the corporate and business services department with the firm at the age of 33, now at 39 he is looking forward to the opportunities 2009 will bring for the firm with offices in Sheffield, Doncaster and Leeds.

Paul, who also became a father for the first time recently, qualified as a solicitor with DLA in Sheffield in 1994 and has been taking on new challenges and roles ever since. In 1997 for example he left the legal world and became a senior lecturer in Law at Staffordshire University, only returning to practise law when in 1998 the opportunity to work within Keeble Hawson pulled him back.

Paul's quiet tenacity and ability to see the bigger picture will help him to move the firm that was founded in 1788 forward, and build on its clear strengths.

As Paul explains:

"With offices across the region we need more than strong, experienced teams. We need to develop further our internal communication strategy to engage employees and give everyone the chance to give of their best and share best practice. This benefits not only our team, but also the clients we work with."

"High on my list of priorities will be educational sponsorship to engage the employees we have and promote originality and individual empowerment – I want everyone to reach their full potential and clearly to see their role, their importance and where they fit in to the Keeble Hawson jigsaw."

From Corporate Law to Family Law, Employment Law to Personal Injury and all

points in between, Keeble Hawson is evolving all the time bringing a vital and fresh approach to all aspects of its legal work.

Last but not least, Paul is also a Trustee of Age Concern Sheffield whose work he speaks of with passion and commitment – something he also brings to his day job.
